

Which Voice Will You Listen To? — Graham Weaver

Stanford GSB Class of 2024 · 2024 · 24 min

To live at full power, you must silence your voice of fear and follow your inner truth—the voice that speaks through energy, intuition, and what excites you most.

The Two Voices

- Voice of fear (survival instinct): loud, in your head, injects doubt, worry, anxiety, fight-or-flight responses. Leads to a life that's too small.
- Voice of truth (intuition, soul, inner wisdom): quieter, shows up in your body (heart, gut, chest). Contains your dreams, path, and energy. Accessing this voice unlocks full power.
- The conflict between these voices is constant. Most people let fear drown out truth. Your work is to intentionally access the second voice.

Everything you want is on the other side of the thing you fear right now.

Promise 1: Take the Nail Out of Your Head

- Your 'nail' is what keeps you stuck: bad habits, unresolved past experiences, limiting rules/assumptions, or fear (wrong job, wrong relationship, paralysis).
- Two reasons we don't remove it: (1) We haven't admitted we have the problem—speak your truth out loud. (2) Life gets worse first before it gets better. Change is uncomfortable.
- Everything you want is on the other side of 'worse first.' You'll reach a plateau, pull the nail, descend temporarily, then reach a higher plateau. This pattern repeats throughout life.
- Stop building a helmet around your nail (coping mechanisms, workarounds). Pull it out instead.

It's not about the nail.

Promise 2: Follow Your Energy

- Don't follow 'your passion' (implies one passion, you should know it at 28, do it for 40 years). Instead, follow whatever gives you energy right now.
- Energy is the language of your soul. When you're excited about something, your soul is talking to you. It doesn't use words—it uses your whole body.
- Nine Lives Exercise: Imagine nine parallel lives starting today. Life 1 is your current path. Lives 2-9 are things you're so excited about you'd jump out of bed to do them.
- Two uses: (1) Pull something from another life into your current one to create infectious energy. (2) Ask: 'What would I do if I knew I wouldn't fail?' That's your richest dream—the path you want to be on.
- The human soul needs something to hope for. Keep injecting it with energy.

Energy is not exhaustible like willpower. It's abundant, like love. The more you tap into it, the more you have.

Promise 3: Go All In Now

- Most people are hedged—one foot in, one foot out. 'Not now' is fear in another form. It becomes 'never.' The two most dangerous words: 'not now.'
- People say: 'I'll start living when [loans paid, more experience, confidence, kids grown, etc.]'. There's always a new condition. You never get there.
- You + energy + all in + as long as it takes = enough. No other ingredients required. This is the most powerful force there is.
- When you go all in, your identity shifts. The conflict between voices dissipates. You stop spending energy fighting yourself. Burnout comes from friction and misalignment, not duration.
- Weaver spent 60 hours on a 5-minute teaching segment after bombing his first case. Went all in. Now teaches with more energy after 22 years than when he started.

You're the person who earned the seat you're sitting in. Your drive, motivation, persistence, and character are enough. You get to bring you on the next journey.

The Meaning of Life

- After his son left for college, Weaver went on a quest for meaning. Studied philosophers (Jesus, Buddha, Socrates, Alan Watts). Conclusion: the meaning of life is for you to find your meaning of life.
- His answer: live your life at full power. That power is already inside you, accessed through your second voice.
- Your second voice shows you where to direct your power for maximum impact. It rumbles on problems, signals when you're stuck, speaks through energy, and wants you to go all in.
- Life isn't millions of decisions. It's one decision, repeated: Which voice will you listen to?

The meaning of life is to live your life at full power.
